

steveinterphoto • Follow

steveinterphoto • @natgeo story in the December 2019 issue - "The Tigers Next Door" by Steve Winter and written by Sharon Guynup

Two undercover US Fish and Wildlife agents display five tiger skulls with bullet holes in them. They are tigers shot by "Joe Exotic," The self-named "Tiger King" a breeder who ran cub petting at Oklahoma's Greater Wynnewood Exotic Animal Park. After tranquilizing five tigers, Joe "walked up to them with the .410 (rifle) and put it against their head[s] and PULLED THE TRIGGER," said former employee Dylan West. He buried them in the zoo's trash dump. The victims: Sanson and Delfish, Lauren, Trinity and Cuddles. "We needed cage space...They were dispensable," employee Erik Cowie said, because they weren't producing cubs. In April 2019, Joe Exotic was convicted in of killing, selling and illegally transporting tigers across the US—and two counts of murder-for-hire. The largely unregulated cub-petting tourist industry involves grotesque abuse and widespread wildlife trafficking and criminal activity. Don't forget the global pandemic was caused by the trade in wild animals. In China at least 6000 tigers are being "farmed" for their parts and products. Let's hope China's new ban on wildlife consumption is actually enforced.

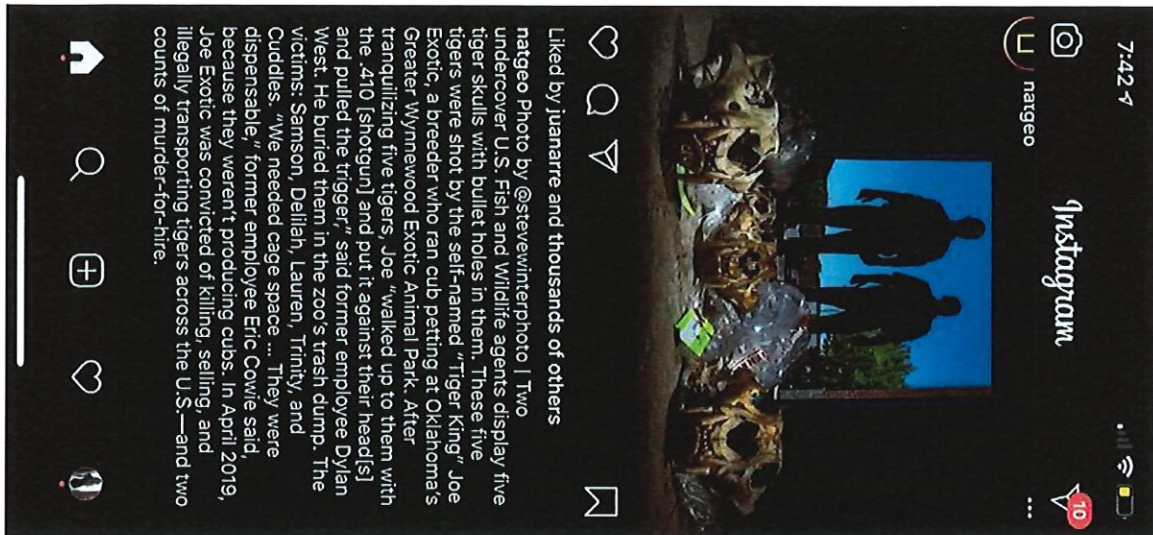

@natgeo December issue US Tiger story:

6,583 likes

MARCH 25, 2020

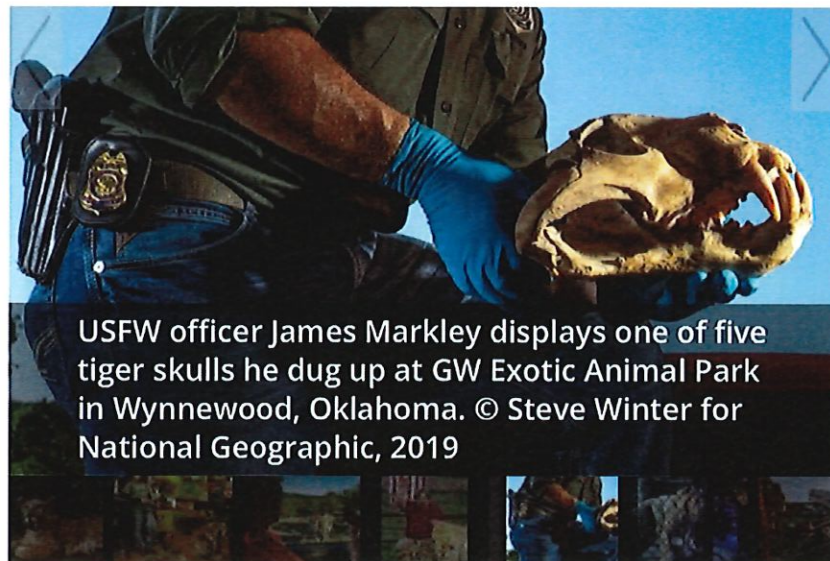

Add a comment...

Post

Guest: Steve Winter

Photograph © Steve Winter

Host: Allan Weitz

